

[Introductory Statement]: Hello, my name is [Interviewer's name] and I'll be your interviewer today. I want to begin by thanking you for taking the time to talk with me. Your experience and thoughts about the study are very valuable to future research so we really appreciate you taking the time to complete this interview today.

Some of the questions are sensitive but everything we discuss will be kept confidential. Audio from our session will be recorded and transcribed, but key identifiable information—such as names or places—will be removed from the transcript to protect your privacy. Any question you would rather not answer let me know and we can skip it. You also have the right to withdraw at any point in the study. In total the interview should last about a 45 minutes to an hour.

In case of an adverse event or social harm that is reported during the interview, I will encourage you to report that information to clinical staff if you haven't already done so. I will also report an adverse event or social harm to study staff after our interview. An example of an adverse event is an undesirable experience associated with the products such as an allergic reaction. An example of a social harm is experiencing difficulties in personal relationships as a consequence of study participation.

Do you have any questions before we get started?

My first few questions ask how you feel about the study broadly, but before we get into that I just want to stress that we're looking for feedback, whether it be good or bad. We really want to know what you think, so please don't hold back with your responses and answer as honestly as possible, there are no right or wrong answers.
